St. Joseph Approves Seasonal Parking Pass, Opens Free Parking Registration

The City of St. Joseph is rolling out new options and requirements as part of its updated downtown paid parking program ahead of the summer season.

At a meeting Monday night, the St. Joseph City Commission unanimously approved a new seasonal parking pass aimed at visitors and non-residents. The pass will cost $50 and be valid from June 1 through Labor Day.

Downtown Development Director Kelly Ewalt says the goal is to simplify parking for frequent visitors.

"The idea is to offer a simple, convenient option for residents and visitors who frequent the downtown throughout the summer."

The seasonal pass allows users to park in any available paid space without using kiosks or mobile apps, although standard time limits and restrictions will still apply. City officials note the pass does not guarantee a parking spot.

At the same time, the city is reminding residents and property owners that parking will remain free—but only if they register for a waiver.

Anyone living in or owning property in St. Joseph must complete a parking waiver form, either online or at City Hall, to access free parking in downtown areas and city-owned parks, including Tiscornia Beach, Lions Park, and Kiwanis Park. Proof of residency is required, and additional documentation is needed for households registering more than two vehicles.

Those already registered for park parking do not need to reapply.

The changes follow the commission's broader parking plan approved in March, which limits paid parking to high-demand, on-street spaces during the summer season.

During public comment, some residents and business owners raised concerns about the cost of the seasonal pass and the potential impact on workers and downtown traffic. One local restaurant owner said the $50 fee may be too high for employees.

Despite the concerns, commissioners say the seasonal pass and waiver system are designed to offer flexibility while managing demand during the busy summer tourism months.

The updated parking program takes effect June 1.

Music Bingo is back at Chill Hill ALL vibes, ALL variety! Chill Hill Winery is turning up the volume and shaking things up with Music Bingo on Thursday, April 16 at 6:30 p.m. Each round is a new music category — Expect bangers, throwbacks, sing-alongs, and serious fun in the (indoor) sun. Prizes are awarded every single round. Admission is free.

The Acorn invites you to join them Friday, April 17 at 8:00 p.m. for The Insiders: Tom Petty Tribute Band + Max Lockwood Band. After the passing of Tom Petty in October of 2017, Lockwood organized the band by pulling together some of his favorite musicians for a benefit concert. After a sold-out show that raised thousands for a local domestic violence shelter, The Insiders decided they wouldn't back down. They've found no shortage of demand, selling out shows everywhere they go. Mark your calendars and get your tickets at acornlive.org.

This year Lest We Forget will highlight the semi quincentennial, the 250th anniversary of the United States. In anticipation of this event, the public is invited to attend Tuesday evening sessions at Lake Michigan College, Benton Harbor Campus, Room D-105, to learn from distinguished professors. "Creating an American Way of War" will be presented by Professor Fred Johnson, Ph.D. Hope College on Tuesday, April 21 at 7:00 p.m. Professor Johnson's presentation will include a rousing account of Trenton, Saratoga and Valley Forge. The event is free and open to the public. If you'd like more information, go to lestweforgetusa.org.

The Southwest Michigan Regional Airport will host a free public event on Saturday, April 25, from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., offering area residents an opportunity to learn more about careers in aviation. The event, The Harriet Quimby Women of Aviation Fly-In will feature a variety of aviation-related organizations available to speak with attendees, provide information, and answer questions about career pathways within the industry. Informational booths and representatives will be on site throughout the day. A highlight of the event will be a presentation by guest speaker Sarah Deal, the first woman aviator in United States Marine Corps history. Deal will share her experiences and discuss her career in aviation. The event is open to the public at no cost and is intended for individuals of all ages who are interested in exploring aviation careers or learning more about the field. What to Do When Excessive Rain Floods Your Basement or Crawl Space

Excessive rain can lead to flooded basements and crawl spaces, causing water damage that affects the structure of a home and the health of its occupants. Homeowners must respond swiftly to limit losses and avoid complications such as mold and mildew. The process involves safety precautions, water removal, cleaning, drying, and preventive actions for the future.

Safety comes first in any flooding situation. Before entering the affected area, shut off the electrical power to the basement or crawl space at the main breaker panel, provided it is safe to do so without wading through water. Never use extension cords or appliances in wet conditions, as this poses a serious electrocution risk. If the water appears contaminated or the structure seems compromised, leave the home and seek assistance from qualified responders.

After ensuring safety, evaluate the flooding. Note the water depth and source. Remove valuable or sentimental items from the area if possible without risking personal safety. Althougoh most insurance policies do not cover ground water, take detailed photographs of the damage to support any insurance claims that may follow.

Removing the water is the immediate next step. For shallow flooding, a wet-dry vacuum works well. Deeper accumulations require a submersible pump placed at the lowest point. Operate the pump continuously until the water is gone, directing discharge at least 20 feet away from the foundation to avoid recirculation. Check local regulations regarding water discharge if needed.

Once the water is removed, extract and discard soaked materials. Carpeting, padding, drywall below the water line, and insulation often cannot be salvaged and should be removed to prevent mold. Furniture and other contents should be cleaned or discarded based on their condition.

Cleaning follows water removal. Scrub all surfaces with a mixture of household bleach and water to kill bacteria and prevent mold growth. Pay special attention to corners, cracks, and hidden spaces where moisture lingers. Rinse thoroughly and wipe down to remove residue.

Drying the space thoroughly takes time and effort. Position industrial fans and dehumidifiers to promote airflow and extract moisture from the air. Keep the area ventilated but monitor outdoor humidity. Use a moisture meter to check walls and floors until readings return to normal dry levels, which may take several days or weeks depending on the severity.

Address potential health hazards promptly. Mold spores thrive in damp environments and can cause respiratory issues. If visible mold appears despite efforts, professional remediation may be necessary.

For severe or recurring floods, professional water damage restoration services offer specialized equipment and expertise. These experts can assess hidden damage to foundations and other systems.

Preventing future incidents requires proactive measures. Install sump pumps with battery backups in basements prone to flooding. Ensure the ground around the home slopes away from the foundation. Clean gutters regularly and extend downspouts to carry water far from the house. Consider interior or exterior waterproofing membranes for added protection.

Following these steps helps homeowners manage the aftermath of basement flooding effectively. Quick action minimizes repair costs and maintains a safe living environment after excessive rain events.

SWMI Association of Realtors Seeking Federal Fixes to Help Local Housing Market

Leaders from the Southwestern Michigan Association of Realtors recently met with U.S. Representative Tim Walberg to discuss ways to improve housing affordability and increase inventory in the region.

Luke Jeffries, CEO of the Southwestern Michigan Association of Realtors, said the meeting was a rare chance to host the congressman locally.

"It's not often that we get to have him come to us, so this was one of those rare opportunities that we got to meet with him," Jeffries said.

The discussion focused on federal legislation aimed at easing housing challenges. Jeffries highlighted several bills, including the "More Homes on the Market Act," which reduces tax penalties for long-term homeowners who sell, and the "Revitalizing Downtowns and Main Streets Act," which converts underused commercial properties into housing.

"Those two should really help cut some red tape and modernize some HUD programs...to get more households," he said.

He also noted measures to help first-time buyers, such as the "Uplifting First-Time Home Buyers Act," which increases the amount that can be withdrawn penalty-free from IRAs for a down payment.

Jeffries expressed cautious optimism about federal progress. "Things move slowly at the federal level...But the bills that are or that have been introduced, I am optimistic about. They are very bipartisan," he said.

On the local market, Jeffries said inventory remains tight, but he expects a solid summer season if interest rates stay in check. "Our area is unique in that we do have a lot of second-time homebuyers coming in...Overall, we're optimistic for the year ahead," he said.

Zo's Mini Donuts looking forward to more growth, an exciting summer

Two small businesses from Berrien County are taking part in a statewide competition seeking to find Michigan's most exciting new entrepreneurs.

Zo's Mini Donuts of St. Joseph and Gauged Hemp Block Systems of Stevensville are two of five finalists in the "Michigan's Next Big Idea Pitch Competition" planned for April 21 in East Lansing.

Zo's Mini Donuts founders Zoey and Lydia Heyn are excited for the opportunity after making a splash in Southwest Michigan the past couple of years. You may have seen one of their pink mobile donut kitchens in locations including St. Joseph, Sawyer and New Buffalo throughout the summer. Zoey tells us they've been growing by leaps and bounds.

"We have 22 seasonal employees, and we're running five food trucks, solely run by local high school and college students, which is just amazing," Zoey said. "So yeah, we've grown in so many ways possible, and we cannot wait for the next summer."

Zoey and Lydia say stay tuned to learn what's coming.

The Next Big Idea Pitch Competition is being held as part of the annual Michigan Celebrates Small Business Summit. The five finalists will take the stage for a live pitch before a panel of judges and a live audience, competing for statewide visibility and $10,000 to grow. Zoey and Lydia told us what they're seeking the funding for.

"In order to keep up with this demand, we need the equipment that can produce at a higher capacity," Zoey said.

"A higher production fryer, which is like niche donut world stuff, but it is super important to meet our demand," Lydia said. "Because currently, we're producing right at demand, and as our demand increases, we need to produce more donuts per hour."

Zoey and Lydia say they're thrilled to have their chance to pitch their donut dream at the event in Lansing this month. They say new equipment will mean Zo's can continue doing what it does best -- serving warm, freshly-made donuts.

"You're driving by and you know you're getting hot and fresh every single time," Zoey said.

"And we've never faltered in that commitment to being hot and fresh every time," Lydia said. "You'll never get a cold, stale donut from Zo's Donuts."

The other Berrien County contestant in the Michigan's Next Big Idea Pitch Competition, Gauged Hemp Block Systems, is a green construction company developing building materials out of hemp. It says it's creating a better way to build.

The remaining competitors at the pitch event are a high-tech wellness retreat in Detroit, an AI company out of Grand Rapids, and an AI literacy program out of Grand Rapids.

Dave Says
Time to Sell a Car?

Dear Dave,

I have two cars. One is paid for, and I owe $23,000 on the other. These are my only vehicles. I'd like to sell the one I still owe money on, but no one wants to pay enough to cover the balance. I make $85,000 a year, and I also have enough money in savings, with plenty left over, to cover the difference on one of the offers. Still, I was wondering if there's a rule of thumb to determine whether or not to sell a car in this kind of situation?

Jimmy

Dear Jimmy,

If you really love the car, and by really focusing and saving like crazy you can pay off everything else in your life, except your home in 18 to 24 months, I'm okay with you keeping the car. But if you can't? Sorry, it's time to sell.

But I want you to hear this next part loud and clear. It also may be time to sell if the total value of all your vehicles—I'm talking cars, trucks, boats, jet skis, and their relatives—is equal to half, or more than half, of your annual income. Why? Because these are all things that depreciate quickly. You don't want half of your income wrapped up in things that are going down in value.

You can probably pay this thing off in less than two years if you really focus on making it happen, and you haven't got a bunch of other debt. But if you don't like the car, or you don't want to work that hard to keep it, then sell the thing and write a check for the difference. I mean, when it's all said and done, it's just a car. And anyway, you said you'd have plenty of cash left over in savings if you went this direction, right?

But remember, if this is your decision, start rebuilding your savings to its previous level right after by putting what would have gone for car payments back into your savings account. You never know when life might throw something unexpected at you!

— Dave

Josh Bishop

Pastor

Prove it.

Are you someone who wants proof before believing? How do you know God is real? Some point to a feeling inside. Certainly, there can be a good feeling, but how do you know the feeling wasn't from the bacon cheeseburger and excellent company from the night before? Feelings come and go. Facts remain. Abraham Lincoln was elected president on November 6, 1860. That is a fact that won't change.

"Do you love me? Prove it. Show me." God did. He died for you to prove He loves you. He shed His own blood in your place. Our deliberately spoken words of hurt earn consequences. The purposeful actions against others should be punished. Jesus took that on himself.

He also rose from the dead to prove to you that it was an accepted payment from God. This was done in history so that it was recorded as an event. That resurrection was not hidden from the world. Jesus was seen by many witnesses.

But not everyone believed it was real. One of the skeptics was His own disciple and friend. The other disciples witnessed Jesus alive, breathing, and talking. Thomas was missing the first time Jesus appeared.

Since Thomas wasn't there, he wouldn't believe it. It could have been grief that stopped him. It could have been his feelings of missing out that clouded his willingness to accept his friends' testimony. Even as the others attempted to convince him, possibly visibly frustrated and even calling him a fool at times, he wouldn't budge. "But he said to them, 'Unless I see the nail marks in his hands, and put my finger into the mark of the nails, and put my hand into his side, I will never believe.'" (John 20:25)

But would seeing proof change the fact that it already happened? You don't tell the surgeon to show you the new knee in place beneath skin and muscle. You trust the x-rays, the nurses, and post-op pain as proof that the knee was replaced. Thomas didn't need to see Jesus, but Jesus showed him anyway.

"Jesus said to him, 'Because you have seen me, you have believed. Blessed are those who have not seen and yet have believed.' Jesus, in the presence of his disciples, did many other miraculous signs that are not written in this book. But these are written that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that by believing you may have life in his name." (John 20:29–31)

If you are skeptical, this was written for you. If you are unsure, you are in good company. Join the friends of Jesus who were skeptical but now believe because of the proof that was given. Know that it was all done for you. The risen Jesus addresses doubts and shows you His love is real.

Name a doubt you've had about God. What would it look like to investigate it rather than avoid it?

Prayer: Dear Lord, I believe. Help me in my unbelief. Overcome my doubts and help me trust your love. Amen.

Central Berrien CGA Director,
SMR Chamber

Rooted in Community, Focused on Growth: A New Chapter for Central Berrien

Central Berrien is a region defined by its people, its diversity, and its ability to balance tradition with forward momentum. I'm excited to step into the role of Director of the Central Berrien Chamber Growth Alliance (CGA) with the Southwest Michigan Regional Chamber as an opportunity to help align that momentum and support strategic, community-driven growth across the region.

I'm looking forward to bringing my strong background in workforce and business engagement, most recently serving with Michigan Works! Berrien, Cass, Van Buren. In that role, I worked closely with employers to address workforce needs, strengthen talent pipelines, and support long-term business growth. With my experience working with the State of Michigan, I also provided valuable insight into statewide programs, funding opportunities, and economic development tools that can be leveraged locally.

A defining strength I bring to the role is the ability to connect people and resources. Having built an established network of partners at the local, regional, and state levels and understanding of how to align the right stakeholders to move initiatives forward. Whether supporting business expansion, identifying funding opportunities, or facilitating collaboration, I like to believe I'm known for helping advance projects and partnerships.

That relationship-focused approach is already shaping my work across the Village of Baroda, Baroda Township, the Village of Berrien Springs, Oronoko Township, the Village of Eau Claire, and Berrien Township. In my first weeks, I prioritized listening—meeting with local officials, business leaders, and community stakeholders to better understand priorities, challenges, and opportunities within each municipality.

Central Berrien's diversity is one of its greatest strengths. Berrien Springs, in particular, reflects a strong international presence and cultural mix that brings new perspectives, entrepreneurial energy, and opportunities for inclusive growth. Combined with the region's strong sense of community, this diversity creates a solid foundation for long-term development.

The region's economic base is equally dynamic. Manufacturing continues to provide stability and career opportunities, while agriculture remains an important part of the local economy. Emerging sectors, including viticulture and food-based businesses, are contributing to new growth and innovation. This blend of industries positions Central Berrien to remain competitive while adapting to evolving market demands.

Natural assets further strengthen the region's appeal. With access to open land, waterways, and proximity to Lake Michigan, Central Berrien offers a quality of life that supports talent attraction, tourism, and business investment. These assets are increasingly important as communities compete not only for jobs, but for people.

My approach to economic development partners with a focus on intentional, community-aligned growth. In rural communities, success is not defined by rapid expansion, but by strategic progress that reflects local priorities. This includes supporting existing businesses, encouraging entrepreneurship, and attracting development that complements the character of each community.

Community development plays a critical role in that strategy. Vibrant downtowns, attainable housing, reliable infrastructure, and welcoming public spaces all contribute to communities where people want to live and invest. For me, economic and community development are closely connected and must advance together.

At the core of my work is a commitment to relationships. I believe strong outcomes are built through collaboration, communication, and trust. By staying engaged and accessible, I am focused on helping communities identify opportunities and move them forward in a meaningful way.

As I look ahead, I'm excited for the opportunity to support business retention and expansion, strengthen partnerships, and help tell the story of Central Berrien as a region with both strong assets and significant opportunity. With a goal to ensure growth is not only strategic, but also reflective of the communities it serves.

Want to connect directly - feel free to email jleich@smrchamber.com or call 269-205-8750.

A Guide to the "Bird Watcher's Guide" Guys

Remember last week's rollicking column? Well, buckle up! – this is the hilarious column that last week's was supposed to be!

Last week I wrote about the May 16, 1955 issue of Sports Illustrated magazine because, for a publication devoted to sports, I found the cover story odd. The cover, titled "Bird Watcher's Guide," featured a painting of 60-ish birds surrounding or perched upon a tree. (While Bob Ross didn't paint it, I believe any tree capable of attracting dozens of different bird species at once belongs in Bob's pantheon of "Happy Little Trees.")

The "Bird Watcher's Guide" story, which you can read at vault.si.com, was written by a guy named Dr. Robert Cushman Murphy, who briefly explains feather biology and how birds molt new ones for the springtime rituals of courting, and, ummmm, well, you know, other activities that make for happy little birds.

One weird note: The article's brief introductory paragraph refers to birds with fresh spring plumage as "turncoats." Didn't the journalists and editors at Sports Illustrated know that this word is synonymous with "traitor"?

Hmmmmm, maybe they were looking at the word literally, to conjure images of birds actually "turning" their "coats," for disguise? As I ponder this, my mind wanders to this thrilling thought experiment!: What if there were birds that could actually change their feathers to look like those of another species? The better to infiltrate a flock and easily procure a poultry dinner – a sort of bird-in-sheep's-clothing kind of thing? I'm picturing an owl with the electric azure feathers of a Bluebird! Or a hawk sporting the deep red cloak of a Scarlet Tanager! What kind of wild transformative ideas can you dream up? Drop me a line, and I'll publish the best ones in a future column! (Note: Wild transformative ideas like "Change the subject!" or "Write funnier columns!" will not be published in future columns. Sorry Mom.)

A quick aside about Robert Cushman Murphy, author of the cover story: He was an ornithologist who became curator of birds at the American Museum of Natural History. This was quite the plum job and must've made him one happy little ornithologist. Among Murphy's many accomplishments, I must mention one: He was an avid "diarist" – avid as in, if he were still with us, he'd totally be posting Facebook photos of every single thing he eats. Without social media, he wrote things down on paper. You can go through his papers in a couple different archival collections, where, among other things, you'll learn how many pairs of nylon socks he purchased in his lifetime. But wait! – he also recorded how many times he wore each pair!

Murphy's article is accompanied by 24 paintings of birds, all executed by Arthur Singer, an award-winning artist who specialized in bird illustration.

I actually have a Singer work hanging in my home – it's a complete panel of 50 1982 U.S. postage stamps, featuring the state birds of each state. I read that he wanted each stamp to be different, which wasn't easy when you consider that seven states have the Cardinal as their state bird. Singer's solution was both simple and transformative! – he depicted each Cardinal in a different kind of happy little tree! And wearing a different pair of nylon socks!
